

NATIONAL PUBLIC HOUSING MUSEUM

Presents a Human Rights Day Event:

"Coming Home: The Dry Storm"

A film viewing & discussion on Housing as a Human Right

After Katrina's destruction, the New Orleans City Council voted to demolish the majority of the city's public housing, replacing it with privately owned developments, displacing thousands of people. Coming Home shows the housing crisis in New Orleans and speaks to a broader pattern of privatization of public resources that satisfy human rights for us all.
