

The National Public Housing Museum, with the Graham Foundation and Archeworks, is proud to present:

A Lecture with Marie J. Aquilino and her book Beyond Shelter: Architecture and Human Dignity

As the rate of natural disasters increases, so does the need to help rebuild the communities and lives of those affected. Across the world, huge efforts are being made to assist communities struggling to recover in the short- and long-term from natural disasters. Marie J. Aquilino will describe the ways in which some of the world's most innovative architecture and engineering firms, nonprofits and research centers are changing how we engage in disaster recovery solutions. She will recount, as well, her recent work in Haiti, where she and her architecture students are designing and building an orphanage and educational, medical, and other facilities.

Marie J. Aquilino is a professor of architectural history at the École Spéciale d'Architecture (ESA) in Paris and serves as associate program director of the BaSiC Initiative.

Date: February 22, 2012

Time: 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Location: The Graham Foundation
4 West Burton Place
Chicago, IL 60610

The National Public Housing Museum is a living cultural experience on human rights and social justice that interprets the American experience in public housing. The Museum draws on the power of place and memory to illuminate the resilience of poor and working class families of every race and ethnicity to realize the promise of America.